Overview of Niizashiki Chuo General Hospital

Niizashiki Chuo General Hospital is a core community hospital that has served Niiza city, Saitama prefecture, and surrounding communities for 40 years. Surrounded by various localities, the hospital serves more than 700,000 people from an area covering eight cities and two towns, and hospital staff strive to help people live a healthy life by providing members of the community with advanced medical care in line with the hospital's mission to "practice thoughtful and high-quality healthcare based on a love of people." In May 2007, to fulfill its role as a core community hospital, it finished a new hospital wing, complete with healthcare systems capable of meeting people's diverse needs. The new wing provides a comfortable medical treatment environment and functional outpatient healthcare (orthopedics, dermatology, pediatrics, gynecology, and urology). Also in its role as a core community hospital, it has systems in place to provide around-the-clock emergency care. Niizashiki Chuo General Hospital will continue striving to be a trusted partner of the community and a hospital that people can rely on in times of need.
